With our standard Pro printing we assume supplied images are edited and print ready, so we make no further corrections. This is so that you are able to edit your images on your system how you would like them to look.

However, to achieve good, consistent results it is essential that you calibrate your monitor regularly using a hardware calibration device such as X-Rite i1Display Pro or Spider etc. These are available from various outlets, and one of the best and most helpful is <https://gb.colorconfidence.com>. If you do not use a fully colour managed workflow, you really are not getting the best from your images. Please contact us if you require more advice regarding colour management.

If you are not confident that you have edited correctly, we are able to make minor adjustments prior to printing. This added service can be requested at the time of placing the order. Editing is very subjective, so you must accept that any adjustments will be made so that the images look how we feel they should.

Should you wish, we can create a © notice for you that is printed on the reverse of each photograph such as "© Joe Bloggs Photography". Ask for more details.
